Circulated to 108,000 homes and businesses by Hackney Council

Issue 317 21 October 2013

Hoxton's rich tapestry

The final two mosaics of a set of five were unveiled at Shepherdess Walk on 10 October. The imagery depicts scenes from past and present day Hoxton

A MOSAIC in Shepherdess Walk park was officially unveiled on 10 October after two years of painstaking hard work.

Artist Tessa Hunkin designed the Hoxton mosaics with volunteers from Hackney Drug and Alcohol Action Team's Lifeline Project, a community drug and alcohol service. She said: "This project has provided an oasis of calm for many of the participants."

The unveiling ceremony was well attended by residents, project volunteers, two shepherdesses, one shepherd and an actual sheep.

The project was funded by the Council to capture life in Hackney parks during the London 2012 Games.

HUB, HUB AND AWAY

PLANS for a state-of-the-art fashion development in Hackney Central have been approved by the Council.

The multi-million pound project, which is a joint venture between Chatham Works Limited and Manhattan Loft Corporation, is set to bring hundreds of new jobs to the area.

It will build on the success of temporary outlet stores on the site – occupied by Pringle, Aquascutum, Halcyon Days and The Hackney Shop on Morning Lane – which are already providing jobs for residents, and free retail space for local designers to sell their products alongside established brands.

Harry Handelsman, Chief Executive of Manhattan Loft Corporation, said: "The go-ahead for the Hackney Fashion Hub is great news for Hackney and for London as the fashion capital of the world. We are delighted that these visionary plans have been granted permission.

"We can now start delivering the plans that will create a new fashion destination that will provide jobs in the area and extra footfall to existing local shops."

The Council's Ways into Work team is closely involved with the project, to make sure that unemployed residents are first in line for jobs in roles including sales; manufacturing, stitching; catering and hospitality; security; and fashion design.

Hackney Homes' new apprentices: Max Ward, 16, Sebastian Gardiner, 17, Terence Fillery, 17, Yasar Cankaya, 16, Benan Mehmet, 17, Jacob Cooke, 18

It's electrifying

SIX local apprentices are the latest to join Hackney Homes as part of a training programme that has so far helped 66 people.

Since the scheme began in 2001, 45 apprentices have gone on to gain full-time employment.

Whittled down from more than 50 applicants, aged between 16 and 19, the apprentices passed an interview and written test.

They will work alongside a qualified operative for four days a week and attend college for one day a week.

> "I'm looking forward to completing the course and finding out more about the electrical trade"

Apprentices will gain practical experience and learn a range of skills within the electrical, gas and multi-trade departments.

Qualified electrician David Kavanagh grew up in the borough and began his career as a Hackney Homes electrical apprentice in 2002. After completing the scheme, he is mentoring those new to the trade.

He said:"I started the scheme when I was 19-years-old and within a year of qualifying, I began mentoring electrical apprentices. I enjoy working with the new starters and seeing their excitement at learning a new skill.

"The apprentices are enthusiastic, easy to get along with and over the years many of those who I mentored have qualified and become close friends."

Electrical apprentice Sebastian Gardiner, 17, recently joined the scheme after leaving school.

He said: "I'm looking forward to completing the course and finding out more about the electrical trade. I've heard a lot about the scheme and I like the fact that there are always people around to help you."

Fresh-faced and full of enthusiasm, the apprentices are looking forward to rubbing shoulders with experienced colleagues and gaining vital knowledge to set them on the path to their future career.

Cllr Philip Glanville, Cabinet Member for Hackney Homes and Regeneration Estates, welcomed the apprentices on board.

He said: "The scheme gives the younger generation an opportunity to get practical experience, gain a qualification and support with future job prospects. It's wonderful to see our young apprentices full of excitement and wanting to make a difference."

KEY FACT

Since the apprenticeship scheme began in 2001, over 66 apprentices have joined the programme

A LIVELY debate at Hackney Picturehouse brought together some of the most well-known faces in sport, media and academia to discuss issues facing black people in sport.

'The Great Sports Debate' took place on 17 October as part of Black History Month. Panel members included Olympic gold medallist Christine Ohuruogu; Team GB 200m sprinter Margaret Adeoye; The Voice's sports editor Rodney Hinds; Leeds Metropolitan University Professor Kevin Hylton; former GB international athlete Michelle Pierre-Carr; and Chelsea's first black footballer Paul Canoville.

> "The only way to kick racism out of sport is to have people at all levels of management"

The 'Question Time' style debate began with an introductory question, asking how panel members got involved in sport and then focused on the balance between sport and education. Most agreed the two complimented each other.

Opinions were divided over racism in sport. Christine said she had 'not really experienced racism', adding: "People fear what they don't understand. It's not malice, it's ignorance. They don't know they are being offensive. We need more diversity at the top end of management. Make sure you're so good they can't discriminate. Don't be average. Set you standards as high as you can."

When Paul started out at Chelsea, he revealed he was a victim of racism not just from opposition supporters, but his own side's fans, and even teammates. He said: "In the 80s, being at Chelsea, I did not expect that." He went on to explain how things had changed but said there was still a long way to go.

Margaret said racism is more prevalent in some sports than in others. Adding: "The only way to kick racism out of sport is to have people at all levels of management. In the UK we're very far away from that, but there is always a ceiling. We aim to push through that ceiling."

Michelle, who studied journalism, found race was no bar when she went on to become a sports reporter. She said: "It helped my career, as I was the only black woman on BBC Sport."

One of the key points discussed was the future of sport in the UK. For Rodney, funding was a crucial factor. Kevin ended the evening on a positive note, saying: "Where there is the desire, there is a way."

News in brief

Get your panto glad rags on

OUTRAGEOUS frocks, glitzy heels, pantomime horses and excessive make up are set to light up the streets of Hackney for the 2013 'Dame Dash' fun run.

The fundraising event is due to start at St Joseph's Hospice, on Mare Street, on 27 October and travel 1km to a finishing point at Hackney Empire.

People are urged to don their most extravagant costumes and help raise money for two worthwhile causes: St Joseph's Hospice and the Empire.

Men should think about plastering on the make-up, wigs and glittery dresses, while women may want to look like their pantomime hero – perhaps Peter Pan, Prince Charming or Puss in Boots. Teams entries are encouraged, so gather your ugly sisters and create mayhem.

Dame Dash is suitable for all ages. Registration is £15 for adults, £5 for children, and family registration covers two adults and up to three children for £35. The day starts with registration at 12noon and the dash officially begins at 1pm. For more info, or to join up, visit: www.damedash.org; or call: 020 8525 6033

Chesham Arms pub is saved

HACKNEY has become the first council in the country to successfully defend an appeal against a decision to list a popular pub as an asset of community value (ACV).

The Chesham Arms, once frequented by comedians Harry Enfield and Paul Whitehouse, was closed by its owners last October who claimed the business was no longer profitable. It was made Hackney's first ACV in March 2011, meaning the owners were not permitted to sell the pub without first offering community groups the chance to purchase it, but this was challenged in court.

The vocal 'Save The Chesham' campaign has protested to keep the pub alive as part of the community since its closure and opposes any plans to turn the building into housing or offices.

Mayor Jules Pipe, said: "Our concern all along has been to protect The Chesham Arms from developers and to retain it as a valuable community hub."

The appeal at Hackney Town Hall was the first of its kind to be heard in the UK since the introduction of ACV listing by the Localism Act in 2011.

Nurses get their voices heard

IT was cold and horrible, with pockets of ice everywhere," recalls nurse Sylvia McLean of her arrival in the UK after coming from Barbados in 1966.

Sylvia is one of the nurses who shared her memories for the 'Windrush Voices Workshop and Exhibition', which took place from 16 to 19 October, at St Mark's Church, Dalston.

The event was part of Black History Month and organised by The Windrush Nurses and Beyond Foundation, co-founded in 2011 by Bob Foster, whose mother Nora Parker was just 20 when she arrived in Britain to serve her 'mother country' as a nurse 61 years ago. She was among 100,000 nurses who arrived from the Caribbean and Africa and made a significant contribution to the NHS, despite battling discrimination.

Sylvia, who was awarded the Queen's Medal for services to the community, was 19 when she arrived in the UK on 23 December. She spent one day travelling to Birmingham from Euston, before starting training at Birmingham's Heartlands hospital. She then moved to London to study at postgraduate level at Hackney Hospital (now Homerton).

Sylvia said: "Back then there was just one bus from the hospital. I had to walk from Hackney Hospital to what was the London Electricity Board in Lower Clapton, where there was one shop to buy all your household items. Now, everything has improved."

> "This exhibition is like travelling down memory lane. What a piece of history

Sylvia was one of 12 people to be awarded a Queen's Gold Medal Diamond Jubilee award in July. Other recipients included Suresh Rambaran and Avis Williams-McKoy who both attended the exhibition opening.

Suresh arrived in 1973 from Trinidad. He said: "There were quite a few male nurses, especially from Malaysia and Mauritius. I worked at the Royal Marsden Hospital for at least 10 years. There were Muslim and Jewish people who were being fed bacon for breakfast, so I taught and advocated cultural awareness."

As well as the Queen's Award, Suresh received recognition for his work raising awareness of prostate cancer in African-Caribbean men, who are three times more likely to be diagnosed with the disease than their Caucasian counterparts. He is also the founding member and trustee of the charity Cancer Equality, and with this charity, established Ethnic Minority Cancer Awareness Week. Suresh will turn 65 in December, but shows no sign of slowing down.

Avis became a general nurse in 1980 before turning her hand to midwifery in 1988. She said: "It has been a year-long celebration since last October's Black History Month. The pinnacle was receiving the Queen's Award."

The exhibition was brought to life with memorabilia donated by the nurses, who brought images, uniforms and newspaper clippings. Old medical equipment, a hospital bed and awards were also on display in the church hall.

The main focus of the event was not just to share and evoke the rich history, but to inspire the next generation of health pioneers.

Rev Josh Zvimba, of St Mark's Church thanked the founders of the exhibition and said: "This exhibition is like travelling down memory lane. What a piece of history. The 50s and 60s were not an easy time. We were not wanted. This celebrates advancement by the black folk who made a huge difference to the health service. Spread the word."

The Windrush Voices Exhibition is set to travel to East Finchley, Oakwood and Chelmsford in Essex, before touring other parts of the country.

Computer generated images of the proposed fashion hub, which is a joint venture between Manhattan Loft Corporation and Chatham Works Limited

Fashion forward

THE newly approved plans were designed by architects Adjaye Associates, who have said they are determined not to ruin the area's character.

They will link in with the refurbishment of railway arches in Morning Lane, between Churchwell Path and Link Street, where work has already begun to create new retail spaces.

Resident Priscilla Dacosta, who works at the Aquascutum store on Morning Lane, said: "The people at the fashion hub and Ways into Work have already done lots to help people like me find a job in Hackney – it's made a huge difference to my life as this is my first ever job. More jobs in the local area have got to be a good thing."

> "One of the key goals for us is that the fashion hub creates local jobs and opportunities for residents"

Internationally renowned fashion designer Henry Holland added: "Anything that pumps money into the local economy and creates jobs is a bonus."

A new Stitching Academy is also set to open as part of the development. It will provide local designers with a subsidised sampling and manufacturing unit, and customers with a tailored alteration service.

Indeed, apprenticeships and training schemes form a major part of these proposals. There will be an opportunity to gain skills in sewing and stitching, machinery operation, inspecting and measuring, and health and safety.

Cllr Guy Nicholson, Cabinet Member for Regeneration, said: "We are working with partners who share our vision of bringing this world-class development to Hackney Central for local people.

"One of the key goals for us is that the fashion hub creates local jobs and opportunities for residents to support new business. It's crucial that new developments like this benefit the whole community, including existing businesses."

The fashion hub will be partly funded by the Greater London Authority's Regeneration Fund, which allocated £2million to regenerate struggling town centres affected by rioting in 2011. The money will also be used to improve shopfronts in the Narrow Way and Clarence Road in order to increase footfall and boost the visitor economy.

News in brief

Social club ordered to close

A SOCIAL club in Hackney, whose late night parties were causing misery for neighbours living nearby, has been ordered to close.

Residents reported that anti-social behaviour was repeatedly taking place in and around Beemans social club, in Rosina Street, Homerton. This included customers urinating in doorways, littering and making noise late at night and early in the morning.

The Council and police worked with neighbours to obtain evidence before attending Thames Magistrates' Court on 10 October, where they were granted a premises closure order.

The property has now been secured and anyone trying to gain access during the closure period will be in breach of the order, and could be fined up to £5,000 and/or six months imprisonment. The closure order will stay in place until 2 January next year.

Deputy Mayor, Cllr Sophie Linden, said: "Those operating and visiting Beemans showed a complete disregard for people living nearby, who were subjected to regular bouts of anti-social behaviour, which was unacceptable."

New homes given green light

PLANS to build new 15 new Council homes on a site near Victoria Park were given the green light by Hackney's planning sub-committee on 9 October.

The three and four storey scheme on King Edward's Road also includes landscaped gardens, a mix of one to four bedroom flats, plus 17 homes for private sale to help pay for the development.

Cllr Philip Glanville, Cabinet Member for Hackney Homes and Regeneration Estates, said: "This is another step forward in our commitment to provide new, modern Council homes for residents across the borough, and amid highly challenging financial circumstances."

The scheme also has bicycle storage and two parking spaces for disabled people but otherwise, in accordance with Greater London Authority and local requirements, it is a car-free development.

Work is expected to start on site early next year, with the homes for social renting due to be complete by March 2015, and those for private sale shortly afterwards.

The 1.2 acre organic garden at the Castle Climbing Centre is full of fruit, vegetables, nuts and trees

Learn the ropes

The Castle Climbing Centre in Stoke Newington is not only the busiest of its kind in the capital – but also the most sustainable

By Rebecca Shahoud

THE Castle Climbing Centre in Stoke Newington is set to become the largest facility of its type in Europe, when work to utilise more of the Victorian building is completed in 2015.

It is currently the busiest climbing centre in the UK, according to manager Efua Uiterwijk, with around 400 visitors a day. Indeed, the size of the place – which was originally built as a water pumping station for the New River Company – is overwhelming.

The walls are covered in vibrant coloured climbing holds, which look arbitrarily placed, but under closer inspection are arranged into routes and graded according to difficulty.

A beginner can start out using all the holds, but as they progress, choose a harder route.

> “The Castle has become so much more than just a climbing centre”

The Castle offers a range of courses for beginners, intermediate and advanced climbers.

The ‘have-a-go’ session, which I tried, lasts one-and-a-half hours and includes a 100ft free-fall abseil down the interior of one of the Castle towers. A walk up a large spiral staircase leads to a trapdoor where the climber lowers themselves into the belly of the tower.

The session also introduces different types of climbing such as bouldering, traversing, lead climbing and top-roping.

The Castle is surrounded by a 1.2 acre organic garden full of fruit, vegetables, nuts and trees. The garden contains the Roundhouse, a wooden gathering space built by volunteers and staff, and growing plots maintained by residents. The centre also produces its own lip balms and hand creams, using herbs and beeswax from local sources, including the garden.

Efua, who initially joined as a climbing instructor, has worked at the Castle for seven years. She said: “People are amazed at the amount we produce. In the garden there are layers of food growing. The Castle has become so much more than just a climbing centre.”

Sustainability is a fundamental part of the centre’s ethos and everything from the adhesive tape to the climbing holds are scrutinised to provide the most environmentally friendly alternative.

Over the years, the Castle has won a number of sustainability awards, as well as two golds in this year’s Hackney In Bloom awards.

“People keep coming back to the Castle for so many reasons. They love the variety of climbing and awesome route settings, but also the fabulous building and the range and number of events we put on.” Efua Uiterwijk, centre manager

Cllr Jonathan McShane with staff, volunteers and project members at the unveiling of mosaics in Shepherdess Walk park

The final piece

The completion of five mosaics in Shepherdess Walk also marks new beginnings for the volunteers who worked on them for two years

A PROJECT which has united 150 people over the past two years to create a series of mosaics that now adorn Shepherdess Walk park was officially unveiled this month.

The final two mosaics were proudly revealed on 10 October at a ceremony that was well attended by residents, project volunteers, two shepherdesses, one shepherd, and an extremely well behaved sheep from Hackney City Farm. The mosaics in Shepherdess Walk, Hoxton, were designed by artist Tessa Hunkin, and funded by the Council to celebrate life in Hackney's parks during the Olympic summer.

> "I believe that art can heal people and bring togetherness. Hackney has a rich culture – it is a wonderful place"

For the past two years, Tessa worked with members of the Hackney Drug and Alcohol Action Team's Lifeline Project – which helps vulnerable adults through art therapy – to make the mosaics with community volunteers.

Tessa said: "This project has provided an oasis of calm for many of the participants. People have found it very helpful to have a place where they can come on a regular basis that is not identified with the drug and alcohol services."

For the volunteers the experience has been enriching, instilling them with a new found confidence and providing them with a sense of community in a safe, non-judgemental and welcoming environment.

Katy Dixon is an artist who joined the project through Lifeline. She said: "I believe that art can heal people and bring togetherness. Hackney has a rich culture – it is a wonderful place."

It read: 'The final piece has now been set; Tessa's idea has come to fruition; With a myriad of tiles we'll not forget; The pure strength of our determination.'

The mosaics depict imagery from days gone by when the park was a field with shepherdesses herding their flock, surrounded by rabbits and birds. And more contemporary scenes in today's popular hang-outs, including London Fields and Clissold Park, with dog walkers, mobile phones, skateboards and frisbee players.

Cllr Jonathan McShane, Cabinet Member for Health, Social Care and Culture, cut the ribbon at the unveiling ceremony.

He said: "This is so much more than a wonderful piece of public art. It is a real example of people coming together to create something for their neighbourhood, while recovering from some difficult circumstances.

"It's about regeneration of a space, but more importantly, it's about regeneration of people."

Tessa and her team have now been commissioned by Sainsbury's in Old Street to create a large piece for their wall. The project is also moving to a new venue in Hackney Downs to work on park improvements there.

Long-term resident and drag queen Jonathan Wooster, aka Jonny Woo, is set to celebrate the 10-year anniversary of Gay Bingo at Hackney Empire on 25 October

THE career of drag queen extraordinaire Jonny Woo has mirrored the transition of the East London queer arts scene from underground to mainstream.

It has also evolved in tandem with the transformation of Hackney, where he's lived for the past 20 years, from 'wasteland' to Olympic host.

For the past 10 years Jonny has been the creative driving force behind a series of influential club nights, cabaret, performance art and multi-media shows, which have grown in following and critical recognition, to find a wider audience at events like Edinburgh and Glastonbury festivals.

So it seems only fitting that this month sees him celebrate the 10-year anniversary of the crazed performance party Gay Bingo, which he invented with friends Ma Butcher and John Sizzle (pictured) in a tiny bar in Brixton, by taking it to Hackney Empire for one final bow.

As the (not so) elder statesman of the queer performance arts scene, he can look back on 10 years of Gay Bingo with a twinkle in his eye and confirm the show on 25 October will be the last. Jonny promises we can expect something 'very big' featuring lots of friends including Gateaux Chocolat, Sink The Pink, Lavinia Co-Op, Holestar, and visuals by PrickImage.

When asked if he has any highlights from the past 10 years of Bingo, Jonny confesses: "We sat down and tried to interview ourselves and we couldn't remember a single thing."

Which leads us on to his near death experience. Jonny describes himself as 'super hardcore back in those days', until he suffered multiple organ failure after a heavy week of drink and drug consumption in 2006. He fell asleep and woke up in hospital.

> "The movement that happened in Hackney had its own identity, sound, fashion, art and has had an influence beyond London"

The experience gave birth to a period of frenetic creativity however. He says: "I came back with a show and took it to Edinburgh the following year, that was all about drug experiences and near death experiences."

The show got rave reviews with new pieces like 'Tranny In A Coma' exemplifying a darkly humourous and more profound performance style that had not been associated with drag before.

His work can also have a political slant; he rallied against the Pope's visit to the UK in 2010, and challenged the use of homophobic language in pieces like 'Faggot', released as a single in 2009. He says: "It was written because I was given loads of abuse, so I did a song with a chorus of all the hate words. "

It's work like this that has influenced a whole new wave of cabaret and drag artists who are changing the perception of the art form. Many of them were able to develop their skills during Jonny's nine-year residency at East London cabaret space Bistrotheque.

Jonny was also massively influential in helping create the East London club scene, which developed into a night time economy that was key to the regeneration of Hackney. Nights like Radio Egypt and Dirty Fairy paved the way for famous LGBT-run clubs, like Dalston Superstore.

He says: "When I first moved to Shoreditch about 20 years ago, it used to feel like a bit of wasteland. Then from the early 90s onwards the art/fashion/music scene really boomed. Really seminal things were happening in Hackney. The movement that began here has had an influence way beyond London, a global influence. I'm very pleased and proud that I moved into Shoreditch at the time that I did, to be in an area right at the moment when, crucially, it became the focus for a two decade period of change and regeneration."

Jonny also believes another factor in Hackney's uniqueness is its history of immigration, which has created a tolerant atmosphere. He says: "I think it has always felt like a place that you can be yourself, whatever that is. Because it's such a melting pot, it feels quite safe. So as a young gay person, when you are finding your identity, what better place to come than a place which is all about identity."

As Jonny looks forward to Gay Bingo's last hurrah, he reveals he wants to open his own cabaret/bar in Hackney and is looking for a suitable venue. Wherever it is, one thing's for sure, there will be a road block when it opens.

THE GREEN GENIE

All your green questions answered

Q: Foxes have ripped open a green sack outside my house, spreading rubbish all over the street. Can I have a bin to store my green sacks outdoors?

A: The Council does not provide recycling bins for residents. If you have space outside your property you are welcome to buy one and keep your green sacks in it. Just make sure you take the sacks out of the bin before 7am on your collection day so the recycling crews can see them.

Foxes are attracted to food, so make sure you rinse out any food containers before putting them in your green sacks. All food waste should go in your blue bins, which are lockable so foxes can't get into them. For more tips about what to do with your recycling and rubbish, visit: www.hackney.gov.uk/recycling

Cllr Feryal Demirci with City Car Club Managing Director, James Finlayson, outside Hackney Town Hall

Car clubs double

RESIDENTS who want a cheap and environmentally friendly alternative to car ownership now have even more options available to them.

City Car Club started operating in the borough this month, alongside ZipCar, which brings the total number of car club vehicles in Hackney to over 150. Car club vehicles are available 24 hours a day, seven days a week, and can be booked by phone or online from £4.95 an hour, or £1.66 per hour if booked for 24 hours.

> "Using a car club could save you up to £3,500 a year on tax, insurance, parking permits, servicing and repairs"

Cllr Feryal Demirci, Cabinet Member for Neighbourhoods, said: "Car clubs are proving extremely popular, with more than 7,800 members in Hackney. If you drive less than 8,000 miles a year, using a car club could save you up to £3,500 a year on tax, insurance, parking permits, servicing and repairs."

Car clubs also help reduce pressure on parking spaces, with each car club vehicle taking up to 24 private vehicles off the road, reducing journeys by car, and helping the environment. Car clubs are also great for businesses, reducing the amount of money spent on vehicle fleets and taxis.

The new City Car Club bays are at Brunswick Place and Murray Grove in Shoreditch; Brett Road and Florfield Road in central Hackney; and Long Street, Hoxton.

Mexican restaurant fined for dumping food waste in the street

THE owners of Mexican Express restaurant on City Road have been fined for dumping food waste in the street.

The manager denied the black bin sacks left on the street had come from the restaurant, but till receipts found among the waste by Council inspectors indicated that it had.

The manager was also unable to provide evidence that arrangements were in place to legally dispose of the restaurant's rubbish.

Thames Magistrates Court fined C&L Foods Distribution Ltd, which owns the restaurant, £2,000 plus costs of £3, 255, on 27 September.

Cllr Feryal Demirci, Cabinet Member for Neighbourhoods, said: "There is simply no excuse for any restaurant to dump its food waste in the street. Dealing with rubbish left out illegally by businesses, known as unregulated waste, costs Hackney residents over £1million per year.

"Businesses must have arrangements in place to deal with their waste, and be able to show proof when asked to do so by council officers. There is very clear guidance on commercial waste disposal."

Thames Magistrates fined C&L Foods Distribution Ltd

On 4 November, Mark is set to unleash his musings about Hackney on an audience at the Picturehouse Attic.
As Mark says: "Hackney has all sorts of dissident history; on one hand I want to be as rude as I can about the place, but I also want to get it right.
"Londoners aren't really from London, they're from Deptford or Ealing or Finchley. There is this obsession with protecting your own area."
The quirks and customs of each area he visits (including Hackney) are set to become part of the show, and will be celebrated – by being ridiculed.

REVIEW

Aida

Hackney Empire, 289 291 Mare Street, E8 1EJ

AIDA: Attention, Interest, Desire, Action. Thankfully for my (slightly contrived) wordplay, it is an acronym that works beautifully to describe Ellen Kent's brilliant interpretation of Verdi's grand opera.
Attention: My attention was grabbed immediately by the gossamer screens veiling Hackney Empire's stage, creating an atmosphere of mystery and foreboding. Once fully revealed, it was clear the programme claim of 'stunning sets' was not mere hype.
Interest: The lead roles, Aida (an Ethiopian slave girl) played by Elena Dee, and Rademes (an Egyptian Captain of the Guard) played by Sorin Pupu had great chemistry, and charisma. Sorin's Ramedes was particularly engaging, with his plaintive John Belushi eyes and expressive movement. But in the singing stakes, Elena's soprano was nothing short of sensational.
To give the show a Hackney hallmark, local people took the the roles of slaves and soldiers. Of particular note were the four schoolgirls who expertly performed an Egyptian dance.
Desire: Aida is a tale of doomed romance, jealousy and terrible revenge. As a reward for his success in battle, Rademes hopes to be free to marry Aida, with whom he is madly in love, and who is in love with him. Unfortunately, he is betrothed to Amneris, the Pharoah's daughter who loves him...
Action: Note to self: make any excuse to see a show at the Empire. This venue may be 112-years-old, but its output is as fresh as the morning dew. Here's to the next 112.

Inclusive theatre

A HACKNEY based theatre group has created a one-year diploma specifically for people with learning disabilities at one of London's top drama schools.

Access All Areas has joined forces with the Royal Central School of Speech and Drama to launch the Performance Making Diploma, which runs from January to July next year. Actors will explore how to create their own performances in devised and physical theatre, with practical guidance on authoring their own work through solo performance.

The group began life at Hoxton Hall as the Rainbow Theatre Company in 1976, with the aim of nurturing participants.

> "This project reduces social isolation and encourages engagement with others"

Access All Areas now comprises four main branches: a professional strand (of which the Performance Making Diploma is a part of); Black Cab, (previously the Rainbow Group); Spinning Yarn, which holds sensory storytelling workshops for people with profound and multiple learning difficulties; and Departure Lounge, a new project solely for Hackney residents with moderate learning disabilities, which enables them to take part in innovative short courses in all forms of theatre making.

Artistic director Nick Llewellyn joined the group six years ago. He said: "I wanted to keep the history and ethos of the project alive while finding ways to develop it. Some 90 per cent of people with learning disabilities are unemployed. This project reduces social isolation and encourages engagement with others. We want to challenge the perceptions of people with learning disabilities."

Participant Harvey Waterman, 75 (pictured inset), is the oldest member of the group, having joined when it began in 1976 'when we were wearing flares.' He has appeared in numerous productions and is an expert ukulele player.

Indeed, several actors from the group have gone on to win paid roles on television – such as Dayo Koleosho who has appeared in BBC dramas 'Doctors' and 'Holby City'. He also performed in the Paralympic Games opening ceremony last year.

He said of the experience: "I thank God I took part in such a special event."

George Alagiah visits school

BBC newsreader and journalist George Alagiah visited the Bridge Academy in Haggerston to give an inspirational talk to students.

George spoke to around 150 young people about his life and career, focusing on what he finds most inspiring. Students were then invited to ask questions on how he came to work for the BBC.

George said: "There will always be a little devil on your shoulder telling you that you can't do it , but you will have to find the confidence to overcome it."

Year 13 student, Alican Tilkidagi, said: "It was a great speech and he really inspired me."

George was one of 25 influential leaders who delivered talks on business, culture, arts, sports, science and technology across UK secondary schools as part of Speakers for Schools Week, which ran from 14 to 18 October.

The power of politics

YOUNG people took over the council chamber at Hackney Town Hall to quiz the borough's leaders during Local Democracy Week.

Dozens of young people from local schools joined in the debate, taking it in turns to quiz a panel including Mayor of Hackney, Jules Pipe; Cabinet Member for Children's Services, Cllr Rita Krishna; Inspector Simon Crick from Hackney Police; Assistant Director of Young Hackney, Florence Kroll; and Hackney's Member of the UK Youth Parliament, Ife Grillo.

> "Local Democracy Week is about encouraging people to get involved in local politics"

Topics raised included policing, regeneration, the impact of the London 2012 Games, education, employment, and the effect of changes to recycling collections in the borough.

Mayor Pipe answered questions about regeneration and spoke about employment opportunities for young people in the borough through the Council's Ways into Work scheme and the iCity media hub in Queen Elizabeth Olympic Park. He stressed that achieving in school can help to expand young people's opportunities.

Nearly all the young people said they thought the voting age should be lowered to 16. Ife said: "Politics is basically about issues, and young people today have plenty of opinions and views, so I think they should be able to vote from 16."

Cllr Krishna added: "Local Democracy Week is about encouraging people to get involved in local politics and have their say on things that matter to them. There is a wealth of opportunities for young people to get involved in Hackney, and this is just one of them. The conversation was lively, intelligent and proved how much our young people care for their community."

Visit some haunted houses in Hackney for Halloween

By Stephen Gruber-Miller

AS Halloween creeps nearer you might be wondering if there are any ghosts in Hackney. As it turns out, there are a few stories that should frighten even the nonbelievers.

One of the most famous is the tale of two corpses buried under Ye Olde Axe pub, on Hackney Road.

After the bodies were discovered by construction workers in the 1970s their voices could be heard wailing in the pub, angry at being removed.

Another haunted site is said to be Sutton House (pictured). The building dates from 1535, and is plagued by the howling of dogs and the ghosts of two women in dresses who have been known to violently awaken guests at night.

As the clocks go back on 27 October, and the nights grow longer, more spirits are sure to grow restless and make their presence known, whether in a graveyard, church or even your own home.

See a local zombie movie made with heart and brains

By Azeem Mustafa, 26

WE shot a horror comedy zombie film, 'Heart & Brains' earlier in the year at YH World.

My favourite kind of horror is interspersed with comedy. As with all things in life, you rarely get just one extreme. My friend is a very talented pianist so the idea sprung up from there; a zombie drawn in by someone's playing.

The movie plot follows the undead duet of two rotting best friends, playing against the tide of time and effects of rigor mortis.

Horror strikes me as a reflection of our inner fears and no metaphor is more apt for our society than becoming mindless glassy-eyed automatons.

Watch the film at: www.youtube.com/watch?v=ju1qt_XG16o and tell us what you think.

So this Halloween... what you gonna watch? Ghostbusters!

By Stephen Gruber-Miller, 20

LOOKING for a night of fright and fun this Halloween? Come down to Hoxton Hall on 31 October to watch a free screening of cult movie 'Ghostbusters' as well as a selection of local short films.

The event begins at 6pm and is sponsored by Big Film Club. We'll even stretch to free popcorn.

All films shown will be appropriate for ages 12 and up, so bring friends and family to enjoy a night of ghosts, zombies and film.

Singing for joy and good health

A CHOIR for people with Parkinson's disease, multiple sclerosis (MS) and other chronic neurological conditions is set to celebrate its 10th birthday at Stoke Newington Town Hall.

Sing for Joy is a group of two choirs that use music and voice as a way to promote physical and mental wellbeing. It was founded by Nina Temple, who was diagnosed with early onset Parkinson's in her early 40s.

The National Lottery's Millennium Commission gave the project the capital to start the group, which has been self-funded since.

> "Singing helps us keep and grow our voices, mobilise our faces and lungs, and feel the joy of making music"

Parkinson's affects the voice, and around 90 per cent of people with the condition experience changes in their speech.

MS attacks the central nervous system, causing speech problems. As the disease progresses, words become harder to articulate.

Resident Monica Nettles joined 10 years ago, when Sing for Joy was founded, after being diagnosed with Parkinson's in her 30s.

She said: "People come to the choir with next to no voice and in two years are audible. It's like going to a gym for the voice.

"Singing helps us keep and grow our voices, mobilise our faces and lungs, and feel the joy of making music."

There are no rules about who can join the group, which is led by jazz singer, songwriter and vocal coach Carol Grimes.

Carol has worked with specialist speech therapists and mentors the group, working on breathing exercises and technique once a week.

The 'Sing for Joy 10 Years Louder' benefit event will be held at Stoke Newington Town Hall, on Saturday, 2 November. Tickets cost £25/£18 conc. Includes meze food.

New Age Games for over 50s

DOZENS of older residents have been enjoying free sports activities across Hackney as the Council's New Age Games programme gets underway again.

Activities on offer for residents aged over 50 include tennis, archery, Zumba, walking football, pilates, and badminton. They are delivered by specialist coaches at venues across the borough and are already proving popular.

The programme will continue until the end of November, and begin again in January, with a new series of activities. Those who would like to try something out can attend a session without booking.

Fluoride protection for schools

DENTISTS are set to visit schools in Hackney as part of a programme to reduce tooth decay in young children.

Twice a year, a dentist will visit borough schools and nurseries and coat the teeth of three to six-year-olds with fluoride. The quick and painless procedure strengthens tooth enamel, making it more resistant to decay.

Parents must sign an agreement form from their child's school or nursery before any treatment takes place.

Last year, over 2,200 children across 50 schools and children's centres in Hackney took advantage of the Healthy Teeth in Schools programme. Each pupil received a dental inspection and two sets of protective fluoride coating on their teeth.

For tips on healthy brushing and looking after children's teeth, visit: www.nhs.uk/livewell/dentalhealth

Volunteers wanted to raise awareness of epilepsy and improve access to care

A NEW project that aims to raise awareness of epilepsy has been launched in the borough, and volunteers are needed to help make a difference.

One in 100 people suffer from epilepsy, which is the most common neurological condition. However, there is still very little understanding about it in many communities.

The Epilepsy Society, with funding from the Department of Health, is working with residents to raise awareness and dispel myths which surround the illness and improve access to medical care.

Soraya Bowen, Epilepsy Society's community development officer, said: "We work hard to provide people with information about epilepsy, usually at community settings or at local events, and we really need help from volunteers to do this.

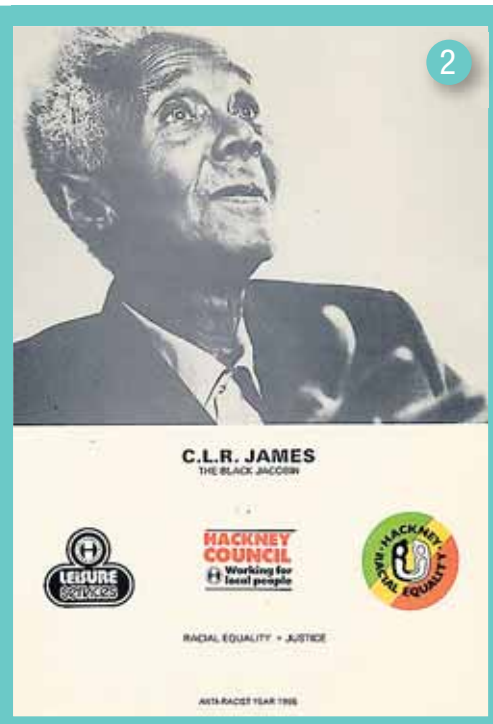

"I would love to hear from anyone who thinks they may be able to help make a difference to local people in need of information.

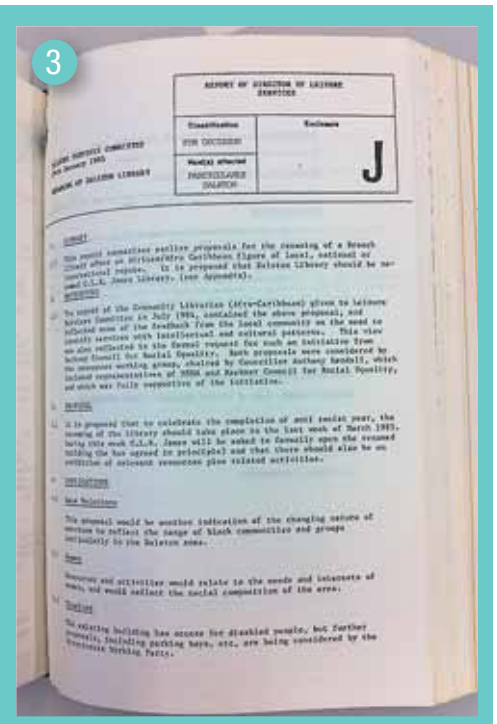

"You don't need knowledge about epilepsy as all our volunteers attend a two-day training programme. All we ask is that you're a good listener, keen to help, enjoy meeting people, happy to learn new skills, and can commit to helping the Epilepsy Society."

Anyone interested in volunteering should call Soraya on: 07880 035 842; or e-mail: soraya.bowen@epilepsysociety.org.uk for information.

Anti-racism year remembered

By Elizabeth Green

OCTOBER is national Black History Month, and a search through records held at the Archives shows Hackney has long been a place that backed equal rights.

In 1985, the Council produced a booklet to commemorate the naming of Dalston CLR James Library after the campaigning socialist and theorist. In it, Anthony Kendall, Chair of Leisure Services, wrote: "We are proud and honoured that CLR James has agreed to lend his name to a Hackney library. We have in recent years ensured that our services serve all the people of Hackney. Our progress to full racial equality will only take place if we are vigilant and strong."

The renaming of the library was the culmination of the Council's Anti-Racist Year campaign, which took place in 1984-5. The Council minutes record that the slogan 'Hackney Committed to Racial Equality and Justice' should appear on all Council mail during the year. In addition, a banner with the slogan 'Hackney – Racial Equality = Justice' was unfurled at the launch of the campaign on 27 April 1984.

The campaign was Hackney's contribution to 'London Against Racism', a Greater London Council (GLC) initiative launched on 4 January 1984. The GLC encouraged as many people and organisations as possible to take part in a year-long programme of events, designed to improve race relations.

A major initiative during the anti-racist year was a drive to increase the number of black and ethnic minority voters in Hackney. Launched in April 1984, the aim was to increase the black community's involvement in the electoral process and boost representation on the Council.

> "A historic period has arrived when the victims of racial discrimination ... are able to fight for their rights"

The year-long programme also included an anti-Apartheid Declaration; re-naming the Council's technical and contract service offices after Maurice Bishop (1944-1983), the Prime Minister of the People's Revolutionary Government of Grenada; a commitment to establishing an Afro-Caribbean centre in the borough; ethnic monitoring within Council directorates; and ensuring the Council received the appropriate amount of Government funding to support immigrant communities.

Earlier that year, the Council had also renamed the recently re-furbished Morley House Estate, in Cazenove Road, Nelson Mandela House after the jailed South African civil rights activist.

The Archives holds local newspapers such as the Hackney Gazette, the Hackney People's Press, and the Council-owned Hackney Herald, which all reported on these events. The Herald included an in-depth interview with Dan Thea, Principal Race Relations Adviser and head of the newly-formed Race Relations Unit, in its spring 1984 issue.

Thea explained what they hoped to achieve during the year, saying: "In my view a historic period has arrived when the victims of racial discrimination, and their supporters, are able to fight for their rights more effectively and successfully. The old order cannot remain. It will not be tolerated, and it is not strong enough to impose its will."

In this climate of change it is perhaps not surprising that Diane Abbott was elected as Member of Parliament for Hackney North in 1987. She was the first black woman MP. In the same year Black History Month was launched in Britain and has been celebrated annually ever since.

Hackney Museum is currently holding an exhibition to celebrate 25 years of Black History Month. Hackney Archives is also holding an event on 16 November, from 2.45pm-5pm, where visitors can view key documents relating to the events described in this article.

The Mayor and Councillors

Councillors are elected by Hackney residents and serve for four years.

The last borough elections were in May 2010.

Councillors have a range of responsibilities, including helping to oversee the Council and its services.

They hold advice surgeries where residents can meet their local representative and ask them to take up issues that may be of concern.

Generally they can help with Council related matters, but if the issue is the responsibility of another person or organisation, councillors can often point people in the right direction and tell residents who they need to see.

Hackney has 57 councillors representing areas called wards – see map opposite.

To check which councillor covers your area, or confirm surgery times, call: 020 8356 3373. More info: www.hackney.gov.uk/l-mayor-cabinet-councillors.htm

Recipes straight from the ovens at Waterhouse

www.waterhouserestaurant.co.uk

THIS latest recipe from Waterhouse was inspired by sourcing ethical and fresh ingredients to create a delicious dish with minimal effort. Head Chef, Amrit Bachu, said: "I think it's great because we are using sustainable fish and fresh produce. "It won't take you long to make, so would be perfect for a quick lunch or a light starter. Enjoy."

Fennel & carrot salad with chilli smoked mackerel & beetroot salsa

Serves 2

Preparation time
10 mins

Cooking time
0 mins

Ingredients

- 1 carrot
- 3 tbs finely diced beetroot
- 1 bulb of fennel, chopped finely
- 2 smoked mackerel fillets
- 1 chilli de-seeded and finely diced
- 1 lemon
- 2 tbs finely sliced shallots
- 1 tbs finely chopped parsley
- 1 tbs rice vinegar
- Extra virgin olive oil.

Method

- First, start by making your beetroot salsa. Put chopped beetroot, chopped shallots, and rice vinegar into a bowl then add olive oil for consistency. Once this is done set aside
- Now grate your chopped carrot and fennel into a separate bowl, and add a little squeeze of lemon juice and olive oil so the fennel does not discolour
- In the same bowl as the fennel and carrot, flake your smoked mackerel into the bowl and add the finely diced chilli and mix through the salad
- Now to bring the salad to life, arrange the fennel and carrot in the centre of your plate, before adding the smoked mackerel on top using the beetroot salsa as a dressing.

Have your say on how people pay for social care services

THERE is still time to have your say on proposed Government changes to how people pay for social care services.

The changes, which would come into effect nationwide from April 2015, are likely to have a significant impact on how local authorities like Hackney deliver care to their residents.

Some key differences are that people would have the option to delay paying their care home fees through a deferred payment scheme. Those living in a care home with assets of less than £118,000, including their own home, could get some of their care paid for by the Council from April 2016.

Feedback from the consultation could influence the detailed development of Government policy. The deadline for responses is 25 October. For more information, and to take part in the consultation, visit: www.hackney.gov.uk/carereform. For more info, call: 020 8356 6262; or e-mail: consultation@hackney.gov.uk

Time banded collections already run on many high streets in the borough to ensure busy highways are kept clear.

The introduction of time banded collections on more streets means that residents and businesses must place their waste out for collection on specified days and times.

Homes and businesses will have two time bands each day during which waste and recycling can be collected, one in the morning and one in the evening.

Premises that are affected by the time bands will receive a letter informing them of their time bands. You can also see the times at www.hackney.gov.uk/timebands

Issue 317 21 October 2013

Changes to rubbish collections

Household rubbish collected on the same day as recycling

From 4 Nov 2013

See map of new collection days on back page

Hackney

PJ52750

Why are we changing collection days?

From 4 November onwards, if you live in a home without communal bins and you have a weekly collection, your rubbish will be collected on the same day as your recycling.

Easier for residents

You will only have to put rubbish and recycling out on one day a week instead of on two different days of the week.

This more efficient system will reduce the number of bin lorries on the roads. Collection crews will be coming down your street one day a week instead of twice a week, which means less noise and less congestion.

Saving tax payers' money

Introducing commingled collections, bringing the service in house and using fewer vehicles and crews is expected to save the council £550,000 this financial year, and £200,000 next year.

It is hoped the new approach will increase recycling and reduce the amount of taxpayers' money currently spent on disposing of household waste. Hackney Council has to spend over £5million per year to dispose of rubbish.

Most rubbish is recyclable, so we want to make it easier for you to recycle more. The more we can recycle, the less we have to pay in disposal charges, so we can pay for other services like cleaning streets, fixing roads and maintaining parks.

What is my new collection day?

Your rubbish will now be collected on the same day that your recycling is currently collected. If you are not sure when this is, see the map on the back page or visit www.hackney.gov.uk/recycling

I live in a block or estate with shared rubbish and recycling facilities, does this affect me?

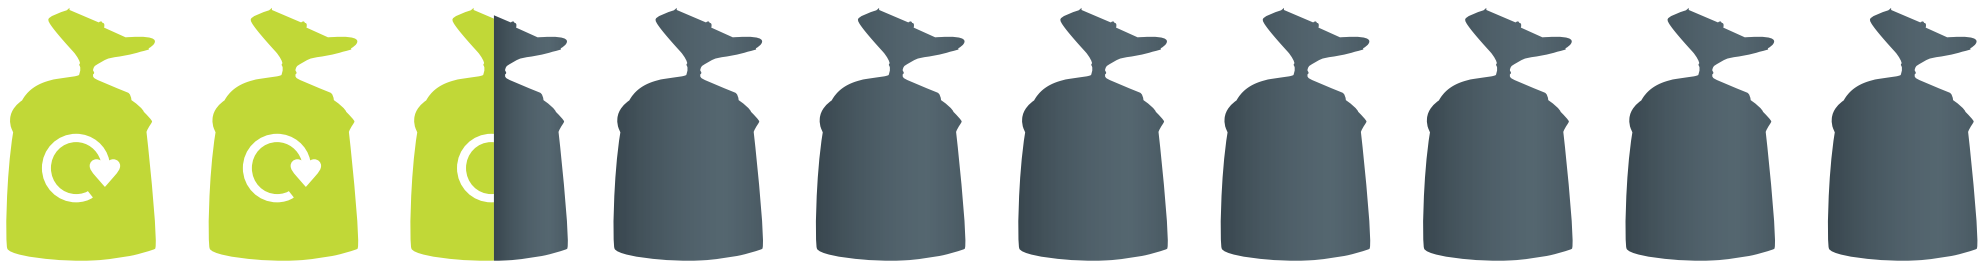

No, your communal bins will be emptied as normal.

Does the change in day mean I will have to wait more than a week for my rubbish to be collected?

No, there will be some extra collections during the first week of November to make sure all rubbish is collected.

How do I get more green sacks, food bins or compostable liners?

Order them for free at www.hackney.gov.uk/recycling or call 020 8356 6688.

We currently only recycle about 25% of rubbish in Hackney.

Up to 75% of rubbish is recyclable. See the inside back cover to see what you can recycle.

Money we will save this year from these collection changes

Amount we could save if we recycled 10% more of our rubbish by 2020

What to do with your rubbish

Most rubbish is recyclable and can go in your green sacks or food waste bins. Put out your green sacks, food waste bins and your non-recyclable rubbish before 7am on your collection day.

To order more green sacks, call 020 8356 6688 or visit www.hackney.gov.uk/recycling

Including cardboard boxes, packaging and corrugated cardboard.

All colours. No broken glass. Rinse and remove lids.

Including newspapers, magazines and envelopes.

Including drink, shampoo and detergent bottles.

What should I put in the green sacks?

Food and drink cartons including Tetra Pak.

Including margerine and ice cream tubs, yoghurt pots, fruit punnets.

Make sure they are empty but do not squash or pierce them.

Steel or aluminium food and drink cans and foil.

How do I use my blue bins?

Put all your raw and cooked food waste in your blue bin. This includes vegetables, meat, fish, fruit, bread, rice, teabags, egg shells and cheese. Do not put any plastic, paper, glass or packaging in.

Food waste in plastic bags can not be recycled. You must only use compostable liners. To order free liners or a new bin, visit www.hackney.gov.uk/recycling or call 020 8356 6688.

Place your small blue caddy in your kitchen and line with a compostable liner.

When the liner is full, tie it and put it in your large blue bin outside.

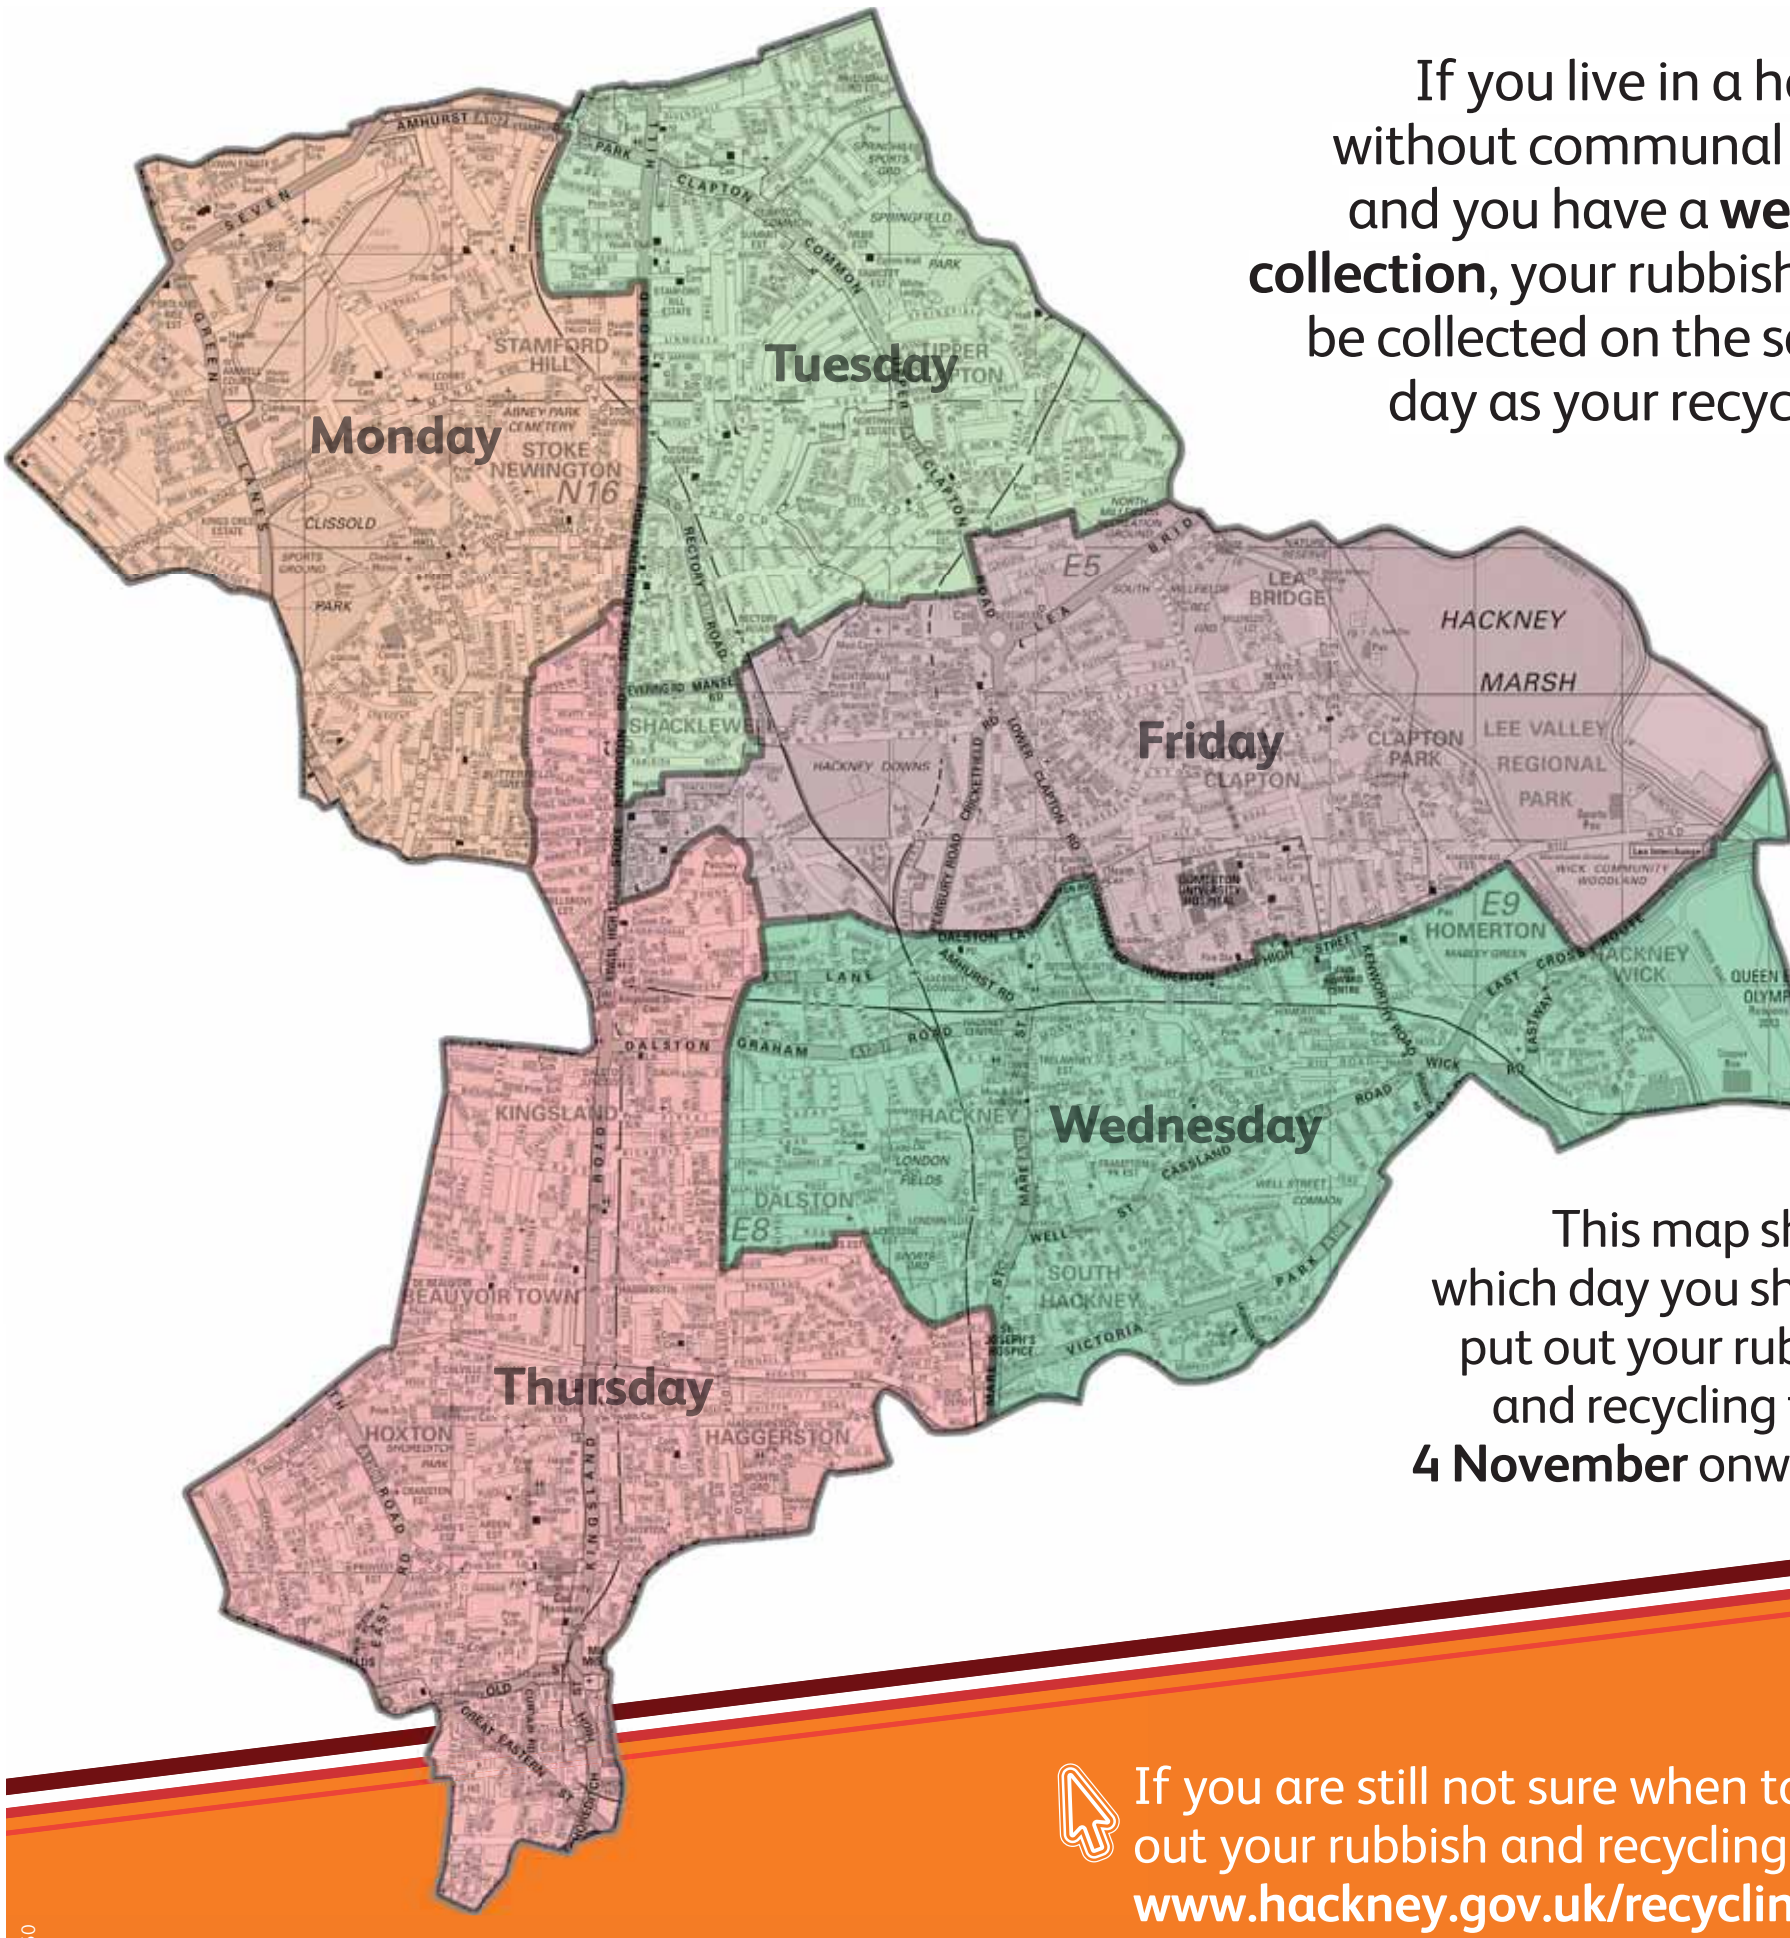

Your food waste will be collected every week on your collection day.

Your non-recyclable rubbish will be collected separately on the same day as your green sacks and blue bins.

When will my rubbish and recycling be collected?

If you live in a home without communal bins and you have a weekly collection, your rubbish will be collected on the same day as your recycling.

This map shows which day you should put out your rubbish and recycling from 4 November onwards.

If you are still not sure when to put out your rubbish and recycling, visit www.hackney.gov.uk/recycling
